1. WILLIAM\(^1\) GOODWIN was born 1782 in North Carolina, and died 1860 in Lowndes County, Alabama. He married MARY TURNER Abt. 1807 in Edgefield, SC. She was born 1792 in South Carolina, and died Abt. 1886 in Lowndes County, Alabama.

Notes for WILLIAM GOODWIN:
Written by Ron Goodwin:
William Goodwin was born in Franklin County, North Carolina, in 1782. William was about nine years old when his family moved from Wake County, North Carolina, to Edgefield County, South Carolina, in 1791-93. He lived with his parents and worked on their farm until he married Mary Turner in Edgefield County, South Carolina ca 1807. William and Mary Goodwin had five children in Edgefield before they migrated to land which was in Butler County, Alabama, in 1825 and became a part of Lowndes County in 1830. Children were Harriett, born 1808, John M., born April, 1810, Simpson, born March 27, 1817, and Nancy Jane, born May, 1824. Another male child, under 10, was listed in the 1820 Edgefield census and a male, age five to 10 was listed in the 1830 census of Lowndes County. This child did not appear in the 1840 census. Evidently this child was born just before the census in 1820 and either married or died before the 1840 census. Their children born in Alabama and the dates of birth were Henry Claiborne, 1826, Lucinda, 1830, and William R., June 11, 1835. In 1836, William Goodwin received a land grant in Butler County a few miles northwest of Greenville, Alabama. The exact location was in Township 11, Range 14, Section 15, Southeast one/fourth of Southwest one/fourth. Daniel Sullivan received a grant in the same section, North of the present Fort Dale Cemetery.

William's daughter, Nancy Jane Goodwin, was forty-five years old when she married Rutledge Hatcher in 1870. Her husband died on April 14, 1873. Nancy Jane Hatcher died without a will in 1906, but a petition for letters of admistration of her estate, filed with the Probate Court in Lowndes County, by her nephew, Henry Jefferson Goodwin (son of Simpson), provided valuable information on the family of William and Mary Goodwin. Nancy Jane died January 5, 1906. The children of William and Mary Goodwin remained in Lowndes County and neighboring Butler County and, with the exception of Nancy Jane, raised large families there. William was living with his wife, Mary, and daughter, Nancy Jane, when he died in 1859. Mary was living with her daughter, Nancy Jane Hatcher, when she died in the 1880s. William Goodwin and his wife, Mary, are buried in Poole Cemetery in Palmyra, Lowndes County, Alabama. Many descendants of this family are still living in Lowndes and Butler Counties. According to a story passed down through his descendants, William was traveling by wagon or buggy on the road to or from Greenville Alabama. He stopped and walked into the edge of the woods to break a switch for the horses and fell dead from a heart attack.

Notes for NANCY JANE GOODWIN:
A story passed down from Simpson Goodwin to Henry Jefferson Goodwin, and thru Beda Carl Goodwin:
On the trip from Edgefield South Carolina to northern Butler County, now Lowndes County Alabama in 1825, Nancy Jane was stolen out of the wagon by Indians. Simpson, about 8 years old, avoided the same fate by jumping around in the wagon bed. Their trip west was delayed while William, her father, found her captors and negotiated her return.

Notes for BEDA CARL GOODWIN: Written by Eleanor Goodwin Thompson

Beda Carl Goodwin was born in Butler County near Greenville on April 13, 1892. He was a farmer, worked hard and plowed a mule. His transportation to town church and visiting was a buggy or wagon pulled by a mule or by walking. He raised cotton, corn, peas, velvet beans and many other things. He always had a good garden with plenty of vegetables and fruits for the family and neighbors. He also raised chickens, hogs, and cows. They canned the vegetables and fruits, smoked the meat and sold eggs. He had a milk separator and sold the cream to be shipped to processing plants for cheese and etc. Daddy and Mother worked together to have plenty for the family. They did not believe in working on sunday and attended church when they could. They taught us the Bible and were good and loving parents. Daddy worked long hours and was always ready to help a neighbor. He later moved to Lowndes County and worked for other people.

Notes for Guy Ringgold Coleman

By James Elliott ‘Jim’ Coleman

GUY COLEMAN DIED FOR HIS COUNTRY

Three of Coby and Fannie Mae Goodwin Coleman’s four sons were in uniform in 1942, less than a year after the U.S. declared war in December 1941. Coby, Jesse, and Guy had enlisted in 1942 and were operating in war zones. Jim entered the Army Air Corps in January 1943 and as the year ended, none of the four had been injured. But as the year 1944 unfolded whatever feelings of well-being Fannie Mae held about the safety of her sons were shattered. On May 10 she received the following telegram from the Navy.

THE NAVY DEPARTMENT DEEPLY REGRETS TO INFORM YOU THAT YOUR SON GUY RINGGOLD COLEMAN SIGNALMAN FIRST CLASS USNR IS MISSING FOLLOWING ACTION IN THE PERFORMANCE OF HIS DUTY AND IN THE SERVICE OF HIS COUNTRY VICE ADMIRAL RICHARD RANDALL CHIEF OF NAVAL PERSONNEL WASHINGTON DC.

Exactly two months earlier Fannie Mae’s husband, Coby, had died on March 10 after a long illness. At that time Jim was stationed in Newport, Arkansas, and was the only son close enough to return to Hayneville for the funeral. Coby and Jesse, both radio operators, were thousands of miles away in the Pacific Theater- Coby on Guadalcanal with the Field Artillery, and Jesse with the Signal Corps in New Guinea. Guy was a signalman aboard a destroyer escort vessel on convoy duty somewhere in the vast stretches of the North Atlantic.

Guy was born in Mt. Willing, Alabama, on May 1, 1921, and died on May 3, 1944. As a teenager he was seen by some as having a touch of the entrepreneur. In 1939 he and George Hammonds agreed to share in a small business venture in Mt. Willing. They bought several pigs, slaughtered, dressed, and roasted them in a pit across from J.E. Scarborough’s store in Mt. Willing, selling the barbecue to all comers. Dorothy Coleman Goodwin commented later that, had Guy lived through the war, he would certainly have been a good businessman judging from the way he planned the project, promoted it and saw it through to the end. Later he became the first person in Lowndes County to sponsor Hank Williams’ Drifting Cowboys to play at a dance at Lowndesboro and split the profits with the teenage Butler County songwriter-singer who was destined to fame at the Grand Ole Opry in Nashville.

Although he was only mildly inclined toward athletics, Guy felt a strong attraction to the outdoors. He enjoyed camping out overnight with friends in Big Swamp Creek west of Hayneville. A good cook, it was always understood by the group that Guy would prepare the food at all such camp outs. Yet, he tried his hand at tennis on Haynesville’s new court behind the old Masonic lodge where he competed against other fledgling opponents such as Bill Lee Coker, Herbert Whittle, Gibson Coker, Eloise Till, Myrtis Hollingshead, Joe Chastain, Buck Meadows, Jr., and number of others.

In August, 1940 Guy and Jim Farrior, both unable to find jobs, decided to try a new adventure. They bought a small wooden boat, filled it with supplies and two hammocks, and launched it at Benton. Eleven days later they had fulfilled their mission of floating to Mobile. During this carefree, but sometimes hazardous float down the winding river, they had not the slightest idea that Japan would attack Pearl Harbor 16 months later and launch the U.S. into World War II. As a result Jim would go to England as a civilian specialist, working with a new detection device called radar, receiving the pay of a Royal Air Force Warrant Officer.

In January 1942, Guy enlisted in the Navy and reported to Norfolk, Va., for three weeks of recruit training. He exchanged letters with every member of the family, including his two youngest sisters, Peggy, 11, and Ginger, 9. In a letter to his sister, Mary, four years younger and to whom he shared a close sibling attachment, he wrote, "I took out a $10,000 insurance policy the other day and named you as beneficiary. Should anything happen to me, you will receive $55 for 240 months or $34.40 for the rest of your life. Uncle Sam is betting for me and I am betting against myself and if you collect, then I win. Simple, ain’t it?"

From there he went to the Chicago Naval Armory for a three-month course in signals training with the rank of Signalman, third class.

While in Chicago he spent a fascinating Sunday studying the wonders the Field Museum, Rosenwald Museum of Science and Industry, and the Aquarium. He enjoyed the visit so much that wrote home that he would probably spend the rest of his Sundays there while in Chicago.

When the Navy decided to use the Armory for gunnery training, signals classes were moved to the University of Chicago's Sunny Gymnasium. It was a good move as far as Guy was concerned. "Facilities at the University are excellent," he said. "We thought we had a nice dining room at the Armory," he wrote Fannie Mae, "but here we eat in a very spacious and beautiful dining room that would do justice to the Sherman Hotel. The food is so good we're all afraid it won't last. I have never seen such a contented bunch of boys."

Family members at home were well aware of Guy's appreciation for good food, but wondered if the Navy kept an ample supply of black pepper on their mess tables. Black pepper, by far, was Guy's favorite condiment. He was known at home for using pepper copiously, especially on french fries. He once quipped, "Pepper is the staff of life!"

What Guy and the others at the University of Chicago didn't know was that a highly sensitive project was going on right under their noses. Six months after Guy left, scientists, engineers and technicians of the famous Manhattan Project successfully completed an experiment there which produced the first sustained, controlled production of atomic energy. Scientists went on to produce the bomb at Los Alamos, explode it at Alamogordo in July 1945 and drop two of them in Japan in August 1945 to end the war against Japan.

Already a licensed amateur radio operator, Guy found the blinker and semaphore training in Chicago a breeze. "Even though everybody's grade average in the class has been going down," he wrote, "mine is still 92." His grades for the six courses he took were: English and Spelling, 94; Blinker Receiving, 98; Semaphore Receiving, 85; Flags and Flaghoist, 89; Procedure, 91; and General Instruction, 95. Navy Headquarters, needing signalmen to staff new ships, urgently requested 20 qualified signalmen from Chicago. Guy and 19 others were called out of class, and shipped to the Brooklyn Navy Yard for further classwork and assignment to a subchaser pool.

Arriving in Brooklyn, Guy wrote, "Back in Chicago two or three in this platoon of 80 men volunteered for submarine duty. You can be sure I didn’t. Some will go to trade school and some directly to sea. We are anxious to know where we’ll be assigned."

In another letter from Brooklyn, he wrote, "My best guess is I’ll be assigned to a subchaser, a small motor driven boat that patrols the coasts in search of enemy subs. That’s about all I know about one."

On June 19, 1942, he reported to the naval base at Galveston, Texas, where he was promoted to Signalman, second class, and assigned to subchaser USS PC 568. Following classroom work, he went aboard ship a month later for his first training session in the Gulf of Mexico. He spent the next eight months adjusting his "sea legs," as well as his inner ear, to the constant pitching and rolling deck aboard PC 568, all the while sharpening his signaling skills. On one exercise his ship docked in Cuba where he bought a box of cigars and shipped them to his Uncle Mid Goodwin in Mt. Willing.

Guy received a steady flow of letters from home, including one from nine year old sister Peggy. He wrote back, congratulating her on her penmanship and encouraging her and Ginger to write more often. Letters crossed each other from brothers Coby and Jesse, already in the service and from Jim in Montgomery where he worked for W.O. Hargrove of the U.S. Engineers at Gunter and Maxwell fields by day and for the Montgomery Advertiser sports department by night an on weekends.
In March 1943 the Navy transferred Guy from subchaser PC 568 to the Submarine Chaser Training Center in Miami. He took an exam on signaling and was assigned to the advanced class. To Peggy and Ginger he wrote, "It's really going to be tough. Will go to school every day, including Sunday, from 7:30 a.m. until 5 p.m. for two months unless I'm transferred before that period is up. Tell Daddy I saw my first Destroyer escort today. They are really all right." His living quarters at Miami were the multi-storied resort hotels Everglades and Alcazar, leased for use by the Navy. These luxury hotels had been stripped of all carpeting and furniture, the beds replaced with double- and triple-decker bunks to accommodate their new occupants. The sailors were not fed at the hotels, but marched to a nearby pier for their meals.

Guy said in a letter home, "I put in for a crash boat today. They are small and fast, and on the general order of a PT boat. I doubt if my request is granted. I don't mind a destroyer escort or a subchaser, but I'm afraid they will send me to one of the new landing barges as they are doing to some of the signalmen here. I certainly don't want that."

His training completed at Miami, he returned to Norfolk on May 4, 1943, for further training and reassignment. "I have a date tomorrow," he wrote, "with a little brunette WAAC from Clarksdale, Miss. She has two years of college and is up for officers training." Soon, orders came through for his transfer to Fargo Barracks, Boston, Mass., where he would wait to board his new ship, the new destroyer escort USS Donnell (accent on the last syllable). Workers were putting the finishing touches on the Donnell at the nearby Hingham shipyard. Guy and the crew waited to board the ship as soon as it was commissioned. Upon boarding the Donnell, Guy became a "plank owner" for the second time in keeping with a Navy tradition that once featured passing out pieces of wooden decking to individuals assigned to a newly commissioned ship.

By June 26, 1943, he was aboard the ship with a new patch on his sleeves signifying his promotion to Signalman, first class. By November he had been on convoy duty by way of the North Atlantic to Great Britain where the Donnell docked in Londonderry, North Ireland. On his second trip to Londonderry, he wrote: "I have a girlfriend here. She is 20 and was born there, but lived for the past 10 years in Leeds, England, before returning. She uses the word "me" instead of "my", for example, 'This is me mum's scarf.' She is very pretty and intellectual, and unlike some of the other Irish girls I've seen, has good teeth."

Guy had been told of the hazardous weather of the North Atlantic where some of the foulest conditions imaginable exist, but he would not be able to understand just how terrifying it could be until he actually experienced it. In a letter dated December 1943, Guy tells of conditions aboard the Donnell as they accompanied a convoy from Northern Ireland across the North Atlantic to the U.S. "Leaving Londonderry," he said, "we proceeded down the River Foyle to Moville Bay to the mouth of the river where we anchored and spent the night. The next morning we got underway with the convoy, which included a British aircraft carrier. We headed out to sea and soon found we were taking the northernmost route instead of the usual one that took us close to the Azores. This route would take us nearly to St. Johns, Newfoundland, before we changed course southwest toward the east coast. Everything went along as usual for the next two or three days. The sea was about as rough as average, with the ship rolling about 45 degrees. "Christmas Eve night we had a 'Happy Hour' in the after-crews quarters where we enjoyed a small band Known as 'Hinckler's Handle's of Hillbilly Harmony'. They also play popular music pretty good. Hinckle and I are close friends. We have been together since 1942."

"On Christmas day it was rough. We had cold meat and coffee for dinner. Too rough to cook."

"About sunset a storm started brewing and by 9 p.m. I thought (with the rest of the crew, too!) that we were goners. Waves were breaking almost as high as our mast, which is 113 feet high. The wind was blowing about 70 miles an hour. We were tossed about like a peanut shell. One man was thrown all away across a compartment and received a four inch gash in his leg that required eight stitches. Another received four broken fingers when a steel dore slammed on his hand. We were all scared at first, but after a while we all calmed down and it seemed that most of us just didn't give a damn whether the SOB sunk or floated. I didn't bother to put my life jacket on after taking a look at the conditions of the sea! I was standing about 40 feet above the waterline and had to almost straight up to see the tops of the waves."

"The next day after the storm had passed over, we found that the convoy had scattered over a radius of about thirty miles. We were 15 miles astern of the main body, in company with one merchant ship. After the convoy was reassembled all the ships sent storm damage reports to the commander. We lost all of our antennas, ammunition boxes, and just about everything else topsides that wasn't well secured. We received word that one of the ships lost a man over the side, swept away by one of the big waves. I guess he lasted about half a minute. Another ship lost it's main mast. The damage done to our compass will amount to about ten thousand dollars."

"On the twenty-eighth, I was nearly thrown out of my bunk by the explosion of depth charges dropped by our ship. We don't know whether anything was sunk or not, but the man who operates the underwater sound apparatus said that whatever was under us sounded more like a sub than any he'd ever heard. On the thirteenth the escort next to us sighted a raft about 400 yards away and reported by voice radio that two men were in but They appeared to be dead. The commodore ordered them to investigate, and if the men were alive to pick them up, but if they were dead to throw them over the side and machine gun the raft. The men were dead so the ship followed it's orders and threw the men over the side into the sea. That same day the British carrier launched about twenty planes for air coverage. They flew around just about all day. In the process of landing one crashed into the sea. The pilot was picked up alive by one of our ships, the USS Sims. We have six ships in our division and stay together all the time."

"On New Years day it was fairly calm. We had a good dinner of roast tom turkey, cranberry sauce giblet gravy, soupe, olives, turkey dressing, etc. We found out today we were to escort two of the ships in the convoy to Norfolk while the rest of the convoy went on to New York. We got to Norfolk okay and then went on to New York. Just as we were coming up the channel in New York harbor we heard an explosion. Shortly after, the first helicopter that I ever saw flew over our ship. After we got in we found that the explosion was a destroyer that was presumably sabotaged and sunk. The helicopter was flying blood plasma to the scene.

“When we docked at the Navy Yard the workmen wanted to know what the Donnell was doing in when she was supposed to have been sunk in the North Atlantic just before Christmas. Some of the boys called home to such places as Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago, etc and found that people there had also heard reports that we were sunk.

"The mail clerk is on leave so I had to assume his duties. We had about forty sacks of mail the first day.

"Am going ashore tonight even though the weather is bad. After that sixteen days at sea, I feel like I could stand a little 'honkytonking'. Received your package okay. Haven't opened it yet. Will save it until I go to sea again. Will enjoy it a lot more."

In 1944 Guy returned home on leave, finding Hayneville an even quieter place than when he left for the Navy two years earlier. Most of the able bodied were in service and traffic was sparse because of gas and tire rationing. He and Buck Meadows, Jr sat in front of the courthouse about 10:30 P.M. an occasional car passed as they sat and talked. Buck, now retired and living in Mississippi, remembers their conversation that evening as they sat in the same chairs used by the domino players during the day to talk politics and whistle between games.

"We talked about a number of things, "Buck said, "including Hank Williams who was about our age and doing well in country music. I could tell by the tone of Guy's voice he was uneasy about something. Finally he got around to what was bothering him. He reached into his pocket and handed me a chrome plated Navy whistle and said, "Buck, I want you to have this to remember me by because this is the last time we'll ever see each other. It was a slender chrome whistle called a bomb's pipe in the Navy. It was about four inches long and attached to a loop of plaited cotton lanyard for hanging around the neck.

"I didn't know what to say,"Buck said. "I tried to comfort him but I don't think it helped. He was convinced that he would never make it back home."

After returning to the Donnell, Guy filled out a shipboard special request form, stating: "It is requested that I be granted a transfer to Lighter Than Air, Lakehurst, New Jersey, or any ship. My reason for this requestis: Would like a change of duty. I believe I could do better elsewhere." The Division Officer disapproved the request with the note, "Cannot afford to release Coleman at this time."

On March 20th, 1944, Guy wrote a letter to his mother. "It has been quite a while since I've had the

It is also interesting that in all the letters he wrote to family members, he referred to enemy submarines only once. German submarines reached their peak destructive power against the allies in 1942 and by March 1943 the Germans had almost succeeded in breaking Britain's lifeline when the British and Americans, using improved tactics, sank forty-one U-boats in that month alone. The Germans temporarily withdrew from the Atlantic, but by 1944 Hitler had fired Admiral Raeder and ordered Admiral Doenitz to take bold steps to regain supremacy of the shipping lanes enjoyed earlier.

Just past mid-April 1944, a group of American cargo ships, tankers, and ammunition ships, designated Convoy CU 22, left the U.S. east coast for Britain. The exact number of ships in this convoy is not known, but the normal procedure for a convoy of 60 ships is when well away from shore the ships align themselves in a rectangle five deep and fourteen across, making up a path of over six miles across the ocean. Ideally, from the head line of 12 ships, others followed in-line 500 yards apart from each other while maintaining 1000 feet horizontal separation. From the four corners of this rectangular pattern of ships were four destroyer escorts 5000 yards out at 45 degree angles. As the convoy moved across the ocean, these four Navy destroyer escorts continually moved in an oval pattern, protecting the convoy by listening with their sonar echo equipment and searching with radar to detect enemy submarines. Far to the left and right of this entire pattern were two more Destroyer Escorts that constantly protected the convoys flanks by cruising in long rectangular patterns while staying abreast of the group. The two Destroyer Escorts protecting the flanks brought the width of the convoy to eighteen miles.

Because merchant ships presented the biggest target, the 4x 14 pattern above minimized the number of ships exposed to flank attack. Troop transports, oil tankers, ammunition ships and those loaded with planes, tanks or vital war equipment were always placed inside the box formation. As another precaution, ammunition ships and tankers were never allowed to cruise side by side, or next to each other, for fear of a chain reaction explosion. Ships positioned outside the core of the convoy carried expendable raw materials such as wheat, cotton, or ore.

The convoy commander in charge of the merchant vessels rode front and center of the group to insure that they kept their positions. The escort commander in the flagship also cruised up front but to one side or the other. If a U-boat attack occurred, the convoy commander took charge of the entire convoy even if outranked by the convoy commodore. The convoy commander was aboard the US Charles Lawrence, one of the six destroyer escorts protecting the convoy. The other five were the Donnell, Daniel Griffith, Hopping, Reeves, and Sims.

At 0700 on May 3, the convoy had reached a position about 1399 statute miles from Brest France. The Donnell began a prearranged zig-zag course, cruising at 15 knots with the convoy at 14 knots on a base course of 39 degrees.
The ship completed another zig-zag pattern at 0900 hours. To be ready for a German submarine attack if one were to happen, Lieutenant Commander Gordon N Street, standing in the charthouse of the Donnell, called for a "dummy submarine attack." At 0945 hours. The exercise would be conducted by members of the 2nd Watch Section team, conn officers and sonar personnel. Lt. J.H. Shaffhauser, assistant gunnery officer was officer of the deck, and had conning tower duty; Lt. K.I. Boone Engineering Officer, was Junior Officer of the deck, stood by the chemical recorder (not actually in use); Lt. N.M. Bell, antisubmarine warfare commander, was on bridge giving ranges, cut-ons and doppler from a prepared sheet; Krupa, Sonarman, second class was calculating center bearings and passing them on to plot with ranges; Newton, Sonarman 3rd class continued regular sound search; bridge talker Musick, seaman 1st class, and bridge Messenger Ripley, able seaman, were at station on remote control depth charge firing and release controls. The three members of the depth charge watch on the fantail were ordered to set a standard medium 13 charge pattern; and fantail personnel were standing by for forfurtherorders

At about 0948, when the exercise was nearly complete (plot showed 250 yard range to mock sub), everyone in the asdic hut herd distinct echoes from the sonar loudspeaker. The target was on the starboard bow, the ship having come to a heading of about 010 degrees during the exercise because the "dummy" subs course was to the left. The contact and bearing of the echo source were reported to Lt. Shaffhauser at the conn for checking. At first it seemed that the echo might be from the destroyer escort USS Hopping, but a second check proved this not to be the case. The real attack began.

Depth charges were "live" and set for medium pattern or at an average depth of 250 feet, as the order to set on "safe" at the end of the dummy run was never given. All personnel were at their stations, and there was no confusion. Lt. Schaffhauser began the conn; Lt. Bell cut in the recorder which showed a range to the echo of 2500 yards; Lt. Boone notified the Officer in Tactical Charge (OTC) by Telephone Between Ships (TBS). The black pennant, signifying the ship was under attack, was two-blocked; Ensign Stewart and Sorensen, Seaman 2nd class began a new chart on the Dead Recokoning Tracer (DRT) and continued to plot the position, speed and time of the Donnell on a nautical chart positioned over the underlighted glass-toped table. Commander Street, who had been watching the plot of the mock attack went to the bridge and stood by at Conn. All stations heard the ships loudspeaker blare, "This is not a drill!" repeated several times. Lt. Boone ordered word passed for No. 3 general quarters gun crews to man the 3-inch guns. Newton, Sonarman 3rd class, held the stack; and Krupa, Sonarman 2nd class continues on standby passing data to plot. A general alarm was not sounded, in line with ship policy to avoid confusion of changing stations, phones, etc., during urgent attack. The conn officer brought the ship around to the bearing of the target and followed bearing movement, which was directly to the right. The recorder reported initial range rate of 12 knots. Doppler reported "low, moderate."

Commander Street stood by watching the picture develop. At about 122 yards he took over the conn. Bearing steadied at 050 degrees. This course was followed until an order to alter to 060 degrees was given at about 600 yards because bearings began to move slightly to the right. Then two bridge lookouts and a gunner saw a periscope a few degrees off the port bow... about 600 to 700 yards out. Commander Street rang the general alarm, a series of extremely loud bell clappings at which time the periscope disappeared. Rowe reported to the officer by phone. No feather was noticeable. Number 2 gun attempted to fire at the sub but was unable to do so because the barrel would not depress low enough. As soon as the men saw the periscope, the depth charge settings were ordered set shallow, an average depth of 100 feet, but men at racks and port K-guns had already changed depth charge settings shallow. At about 400 yards, Lt. Bell reported that the sub appeared to be tuning away. Orders were given to change courses to 050, the ship actually swinging to 040. A water slug (a visible indication on the water surface that a torpedo had been fired)

Was then sighted looking exactly like a slug released by American subs during anti-submarine warfare exercises, bearing 340 relative a range of 200 to 300 yards. Gun number 2 fired one round at the slug range 100 bearing 330 relative. The slug was perfectly round and did not appear to have any motion. It was assumed that the sub was firing at the Donnell or at the convoy. At close range, the bearing of the torpedo was dropping rapidly down the port side. The sonar echos became instantaneous.

After about 10 or 15 seconds after the order was given to fire at the Water slug, a torpedo exploded under the rear of the Donnell. He ship shudder as the explosion sent up a column of white smoke, dirty gray at the top. Damage was immediately visible. The aft of the ship was forced up about 45 degrees in a twisted mass. The force of the impact was devastating, hurling three men of the depth charge watch and the two man crew into the sea. Along with them went both depth charge tracks, three K-guns, the fantail, two 20 mm guns, and a three-inch gun. Within a few seconds of the torpedo explosion, the ships depth charges erupted, some of them instantaneous, knocking out all power on the ship.

Anumber of men who worked the previous night's watch were asleep in their quarters below deck just above where the torpedo struck, were missing or dead. Among the 19 unaccounted for was Signalman first class Guy R. Coleman. A battle dressing station was immediately set up in the wardroom to tend to the wounded. The final casualty count was six dead, 24 missing, and 25 wounded. Following the explosion two men were seen in the water some distance aft of the ship. A small boat was immediately sent out to pick them up.

The ships asft section settled about one foot but remained stable. A crew went below to assess the damage. They cut off fuel lines, checked for leaks and restored power to all of the ship except to Radio Central, which was remedied by use of a casualty cable connection. Inspections showed probable destruction of the shafts, propellers, and rudders.

At 1805 hours six men were buried at sea with military honors. They were Victor T. Gallotto, Seaman second class; Edgar L. Guy, Torpedoman, third class; R.C. Hanrahan, Machinist Mate, third class; W.R. Johnson, Water Tender, second class; Lando H. Hendrix, Water Tender, third class.

Gunnery Saxon and Suttes saw the subs periscope, but were unable to fire at it when, again, the barrel of their gun could not be lowered enough to take aim at the target. Three men whose stations were port side forward saw the sub shortly after the water slug appeared off the port side. Crisp, Seaman second class, felt helpless when he looked down and saw the torpedo pass down the port side past his gun station and dive downward toward the aft of the ship. Crisp's report was consistent with the behavior of the German acoustical homing torpedo, called Gnat. Which had a homing device in it's nose to guide the torpedo to the sound source. Immediately after the torpedo hit, three or four explosions jolted the ship. These were the ship's own depth charges from the port track and K-guns. Some of the charges exploded at the same time and were felt much more than the torpedo. At this time the enemy was estimated to have been 80 to 100 yards from the explosions, bearing 330 degrees. To crack the hull of a sub, depth charges normally must be as close as 20 to 30 yards to the sub's hull.

After the Germans started to use the new sound seeking Torpedo, the Americans quickly found a way to defeat it with a simple devise called the "FXR" gear by trailing a length of 1/8 inch thick steel cable from the rear of the ship with two sets of metal plates attached to the devided end. These plates, about 2 feet long, 2 inches wide and 1/8 inch thick were designed to clang together as they sliced through the water. The noise they created were louder than the ship's propellers, thus the torpedo homed in on them rather than the ship.

Captain Street said in his report that the bridge did not order the FXR streamed, but since the depth charge crew was missing it was impossible to tell whether it was streamed or not. There is some confusion here, for hours the Donnell sent a message to the Hopping, "Be sure to put over your noise makers. That was our trouble."

On July 1 the Commander of Destroyers, U.S. Atlantic Fleet, reviewed reports sent by Captain Street of the Donnell and included: (1) the Donnell properly conducted an anti-submarine attack, (2) the sonar operator was alert in obtaining an initial range of 2800 yards on the enemy sub; and (3) the depth charge crew is commended for resetting the depth charges on short notice. He added that it was unfortunate that information was not available on whether the FXR gear was streamed or not. German naval records acquired by the U.S. after the war revealed that the German submarine that damaged the Donnell was U-765 commanded by (Lieutenant, Junior Grade) Werner Wendt. The U-765 fired one acoustical homing torpedo, striking the Donnell's aft section. The Donnell did not sink, but was towed to an english port. Wendt's attack on the Donnell came during his first time at sea in a submarine combat situation. He had already been honored with one of Germany's highest decorations, the Knight's Cross, presumably for some action before he entered the submarine service.

Following the D-Day invasion of German occupied France on June 6, the navy towed the donnell, it's aft end sealed, to Cherbourg, France, where she served as a floating power plant.

The destroyer escort was widely developed in the Atlantic and Pacific with a few operating in the Indian Ocean. Their main task was to escort convoys between the U.S. and Britain, but they also supported U.S. forces in North Africa. Some worked with the carrier-based hunter-killer groups, seeking out submarines in the central Atlantic. They were highly successful against German U-boats, operating in conjunction with carrier-borne and anti-submarine aircraft. Overall, destroyer escorts destroyed 30 German submarines. The enemy sank eleven destroyer escorts during the war, five credited to the Japanese and six to the Germans. The first DE sunk was off Iceland by a German sub in March 1944, two months before the Donnell was damaged. More than 50 of the Pacific Fleets destroyer escorts took part in the assault on Okinawa. They came under heavy attack by the Kamikazes(Japanese suicide pilots.) The U-765 was one of Germany's newest submarines. Launched at Wilhelmshaven Dockyard in April 1944. On June 6, just one month and three days after Wendt's successful attack on the Donnell. He ordered the U765 to surfaced in the North Atlantic to charge the sub's batteries. His sub was spotted by a Royal Navy aircraft flying off the escort carrier Vindex. Before the U-765 could escape, aircraft and Royal Navy frigates, Aylmer, Bickerton and Bligh repeatedly depth charged the hapless sub and it never returned to it's home port.

Mary, in an attempt to find out more details surrounding Guy's death, wrote to Lieutenant Commander Gordon Street, captain of the Donnell. Street's reply, dated June 3, 1944:

"Dear Miss Coleman, I know that there is nothing I can say to offset the loss of your brother, but I hope that a few lines from someone who was with him may be of some comfort to those at home.

"He had been with us from the time the ship was placed in commission. During this period he had worked his way upward from the rank of Signalman third class to that of Signalman first class. For the past seven months he had been the senior signalman and as such was in charge of the signal bridge and all other signalmen attached to the ship.

"Not only was he well qualified as to his own knowledge of signaling but in his capacity as leading signalman he demonstrated his ability to run the the signal force organization and to supervise the instruction of the less experienced men under him. I recall the plans for the organization of this group and the outline of work to be accomplished which he prepared. These plans were approved without change and were used by his division officer. His has been a considerable loss to the ability to run the the signal force organization and to supervise the instruction of the less experienced men.

"I am sorry that I cannot give you any details of the circumstances immediately surrounding his loss he was not seen following the time the ship was hit although a thorough and exhaustive search was made.

Sincerely, Gordon M. Street, Lieutenant Comdr, USNR, Commanding.

While on leave from active duty following the enemy attack on his ship, Gordon Street drove from his home in Mobile to Hayneville to meet with Fannie Mae and explain the events surrounding Guy's death.

James Forrestal, Secretary of the Navy, sent Fannie Mae a letter of condolence following confirmation of Guy's death. This was followed by the Purple Heart medal and certificate dated September 23, 1944.

In 1994, Buck Meadows, retired and living in Mississippi, called Jim Coleman and brought up the subject of Guy's death. He wanted to return the bosun's mate pipe Guy had given to him 50 years earlier. Jim has since purchased a shadow box frame to display the Purple Heart medal, the bosun's pipe, a small picture of the USS Donnell and a photograph of Guy in his Navy uniform. He has given it to Mary, who seven years after Guy's death, named her second born child Guy Coleman Wynn.

One of Guy'S shipmates on the Donnell was J.P. Hinckle of Jacksonville, Florida. Hincke had been transferred to another ship before the Donnell was torpedoed, but when he learned of Guy's death he took it upon himself to write the following to Fannie Mae. June 4, 1944

"Listened to his reports and reports of others, but not much help to those at home.

"I'm sorry I cannot give you any details of the circumstances immediately surrounding his loss he was not seen following the time the ship was hit although a thorough and exhaustive search was made.

Sincerely, J.P. Hinckle.

"My dear Mrs. Coleman" he began, "I hardly know how to begin what I feel. I must write to you as I know it will hurt you more to receive this than its hurting me to write it. I imagine by now the Navy Department has informed you that your son, Guy, who was my best friend, was lost in action. I only received the news of the loss of the Donnell yesterday from another of the boys who was picked up. I feel sure that Guy had mentioned me at some time or other since we had been shipmates for so long. We were on the PC 568 together and were transferred from her to duty on the Donnell together. I was transferred from her unexpectedly the she left for that last voyage. If I hadn't been I might not be writing you now since mine and Guy's battle stations were in the same place. Mrs. Coleman, Guy was one of the best friends I've ever known and certainly the best shipmate. I've had in the Navy. I doubt if I shall ever find another friend like him. You have my heartfelt sympathy in his loss, and if there is anything I can ever do please don't hesitate to call on me. Guy told me so much about you and his home that I feel as though I know you myself and this is the reason I have taken the liberty of writing you. Very truly yours, J.P. Hinchel"

In 1975, Mary Coleman Stewart placed a brass marker in the Coleman burial plot at the Mount Willing(AL) Cemetery to honor Guy's memory in his home county. The inscription is a year off in the date of his birth, listing him as having been born in 1920 instead of the correct year, 1921.

Jim Farrior, retired director of the Lockheed facility in Huntsville, now lives on Amelia Island Plantation on Florida's east coast. In 1983 he published a 66 page account of his and Guy's memorable trip down the Alabama River from Benton to Mobile. In the opening page of his book he wrote:

DEDICATION
This True Story Is Dedicated To The Memory Of GUY R COLEMAN
As Fine A Fellow As Anybody Ever Had As A Companion On An Adventure And Who Gave His Life In The Service Of His Country. He Will Always Be Remembered.

Children of EMMIE GOODWIN and ROBERT LEE are:

i. ALICE MAE LEE, b. 22 Sep 1910, Mt. Willing, AL; d. 11 Aug 2001, Hayneville, AL.

Alice Mae Lee was born, September 22, 1910 in Mount Willing, the first child of Robert Evan Lee and Emmie Lou Goodwin. Her Paternal grandparents were Alfred Harrison Lee and Alice Maria Woodruff. Alice's maternal grandparents were Henry Alonza Goodwin and Frances Churchill Sullivan.

Alice is survived by a sister, Edna Rahn and a brother Robert Evan Lee, Jr. whom most of us know as "Bud." Also surviving Alice are 16 nieces and nephews and seven grand nieces and grand nephews. Alice was predeceased by two sisters and a brother. They were Annie Laurie Jackson who died in 1998 and Clara Moorer, 1995, and Norman, 1975.

Alice attended Hayneville High School during that school's first year of operation in 1925, but transferred to Lowndes County High School at Fort Deposit where she graduated in 1930 during the beginning of the great depression. Approximately two years later she joined with a number of others in the county and performed clerical work for the federal government in Hayneville. This was part of President Roosevelt's program to stimulate
In 1939 Alice enrolled in Hawthorne Business School in Montgomery where she earned an Associate Degree in Business office Management. Upon graduation she accepted a position at Wilbanks Tire Company in Montgomery as an assistant office manager and cashier. Upon the death of her mother in August 1958, she gave up her job to return home and look after her dad, who was in declining health.

In 1959 she joined the U.S. Postal Service as a substitute clerk at the Calhoun post office. That same year she was elected clerk for the Hopewell Baptist Church in Mount Willing, a position she held until her death. She played a significant role in coordinating with others to raise funds and preserve this historic building. Following the latter part of this 36 year period of employment, Alice developed a keen interest in family history and genealogy.

In 1982, she published the book, Ludbrook and Charlotte Pase Lee, Their Ancestors and Descendants. She began a study of her maternal line, but health problems and the continual demands on her time from individual researchers throughout the state and country slowed her research. Still, she collected and recorded scores of Goodwin, Sullivan and allied family sheets, compiling a data base which has become a primary source for many other researchers.

From 1960 through 1980, Alice worked tirelessly, copying public records at the Lowndes County Courthouse. Her primary aim was to preserve these old fading, fragile records to ensure their availability to future generations. She became so familiar with the records throughout the courthouse that county officials sought her advice on improving the keeping of public records, a service which did not go unnoticed.

In December 1994, Governor James E. Folsom, Jr. honored her with a Certificate of Appreciation. In brief, the certificate praised her for her many hours spent in recording, documenting, and preserving our state and county heritage.

In 1967 Alice was among the charter members of the Lowndes County Historical and Genealogical Society. She published the Society's quarterly publications for 20 years. The Society presented her with a plaque in 1995 for her valuable contributions and for her consistently going beyond the call of duty.

My sister Mary Stewart (Wynn) and I were two of Alice's greatest admirers. Mary said, and I agree with her fully, "I can never remember a time that I asked her for help that she didn't respond cheerfully.. She was happy to help others, whether the request was local or from as far away as California."

When we pause to look back at what Alice has accomplished in her life, we realize that she must have had numerous Excedrin headaches, many losing bouts with fatigue - and lets not forget anxiety and nervousness.

During such episodes, someone would drop in and ask, "Alice, how are you today?" Alice would answer, "Oh I'm just not well at all. Sometime I wonder if I'll make it through the day." Suddenly, the phone rings. Someone calls, planning a genealogy trip, Alice perks up and asks, "How long will it take us to drive to Raleigh?"

This type of behavior reinforces what we already know. Alice Lee was a person with a mission. She loved what she was doing and she knew it was worthwhile.

Those outside the family may not know of Alice's special talents as a cook. Many family members certainly remember the delicious chocolate cakes she baked every week.

Many remember those huge meals she'd prepare for get-togethers. Sometimes she had help. Sometimes she didn't. She must have cooked for days and she always tried to have foods that certain individuals liked: macaroni and cheese, for example for Marty, candied orange slices for Ashley; and cake for Bud.

Who remembers that time she suddenly became sick in Virginia. Wouldn't let them fly her back to Alabama. She hired a private ambulance to bring her home.

Layne and Sharon remember well those many days they drove Clara and Alice to all those cemeteries. They scrubbed and cleaned many old lichen-encrusted tombstones so Alice could record those valuable names and dates Alice was a determined, hard working person with a goal. My prediction is that genealogists in the centuries to come will be looking at Lowndes County family connections. Any success they have will be due to the lifetime efforts of Alice Lee and the many other individuals she has influenced to help others gather and preserve family records.

54. GEORGE IVA\textsuperscript{4} GOODWIN (HENRY ALONZA\textsuperscript{3}, HENRY CLAIBORNE\textsuperscript{2}, WILLIAM\textsuperscript{1}) was born 15 Jul 1888 in Lowndes County, AL, and died 12 Dec 1962 in Hayneville, AL. He married FRANCES AMANDA SHIVER 18 Oct 1918. She was born 01 Dec 1891 in Lowndes County, AL, and died 07 Aug 1973 in Montgomery.

Notes for GEORGE IVA GOODWIN: Written by: James (Jim) Coleman, Huntsville Alabama

George Iva Goodwin and Frances Amanda Shiver, both of Lowndes County, were married on October 18, 1918. They didn't rush into marriage. He was 30 and she was 27. He was the son of Henry Alonza Goodwin and Frances Churchill Sullivan, and she was the daughter of Chapman L. Shiver and Sarah Jane Jackson, of Lowndes County.

They probably met at church, and after their marriage, settled down to a life of farming. Frances Amanda Shiver Goodwin would be known for the rest of her life as "Fannie" and as aunt Fannie to all her nieces and nephews.

A year and six months after their marriage the first of their three girls was born. They named her Sarah Frances - Sarah after her grandmother and Frances after her mother.

The second daughter was Janie Belle Goodwin, born in 1922. Anne Carolyn Goodwin was the third daughter. She was born in Mt. Willing in July 1925.

"Uncle George" always kept a car in good condition and loved to travel. Once in the 1930s, when a devastating tornado struck Cullman, Alabama, he embarked on a 300 mile round trip from Lowndes on U.S. 31, to Cullman and back. His objective was to check out the radio and news reports of the damage. As youngsters we sat attentively with slack jaws listening to his descriptions of the damage. "The force of the wind, he said, "drove pine needles into telephone poles. Homes, trees and power lines were flattened. It was an awful sight".

Aunt Fannie loved everybody. When you visited her home, her shrill outpourings of affection were so intense you were made to feel as though you were the most important person in the world. She loved her family with even more fervency.

Throughout the years Uncle George farmed in Mt. Willing, White Hill and Burkeville. Upon retirement, he and Aunt Fannie lived in Hayneville.

Notes for Charles Thomas Goodwin: By Ron Goodwin:

Charles Goodwin, born in Palmyra, Lowndes County AL, grew up in the early 1900s doing farm work, going to school and playing baseball with teams that consisted mostly of Cassadys and Sullivans. The Cassadys were the children of his aunt Fannie Cassady (Frances Churchill Goodwin). Charlie was a pitcher and the older boys let him pitch for them, mainly because he had a pretty good curve and a good fastball. These same older friends talked him into joining the National Guard with them when he reached the age of 16. The unit was activated and sent to the Texas border where trouble was expected with Pancho Villa and the Mexicans. They were sent back to Mobile, AL, and then overseas and became a part of the famed Rainbow Division in World War I. After the war, Charles went to work with a pickling company in River Falls, Covington County AL. He was the maintenance man for the machinery. Here he met one of the women workers, Lois Woodham. They were married on March 5, 1921. Charles became a lineman for the Alabama Water Service Company and helped in the construction of the first power line from Andalusia AL to Evergreen, AL. This Company became a part of the Rural Electrification Association (REA). Charles retired from the REA in 1968 in Troy, AL after working over the years in Andalusia, Frisco City, Greenville, Hartford, and Troy.

Children of Charles Goodwin and Lois Woodham are:

He volunteered to become a member of a new parachute division being formed and trained in Fort Benning GA. This became the 82nd Airborne Division. A member of the 505th Parachute Infantry, he made every jump with the 82nd during World War II. After the war Charles graduated from Troy State University with a degree in biology and later attended Auburn for advanced studies in marine biology. By Ron Goodwin

Dennis and Clara had an Ice house along with a small store in Frisco City, AL in the 1930's and 40's. Their house and store was only about a block up the street from us. They had a farm across from our house on Snider street. They were very patient and kind people. This I know for a fact. They would let me pick cotton in the fall of the year. Whether I picked one row or ten rows they always paid me enough to buy an RC and some candy from the store. At that time, none of us knew that we were distant cousins.
